FROM THE FRONT AT PETERSBURG. The Enemy Still Fortifying. [Correspondence of the Associated Press.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 20, 1864.—The negro, William Johnson, who was tried and convicted of an attempt to outrage a young lady at New Kent Court House, was hung this morning at 9% o'clock, in front of the Jordan House, on a hill, in full view of the enemy. A battery close by had been shelling the rebel lines, and they opened in reply, throwing a number of shells rather closer than was desirable, one of which struck George Polly, sergeant major 10th Massachusetts, who died in a few minutes When Johnson was arrested by some cavalry, just after his crime, he stoutly denied his guilt, and gave his name as Robert Heary Hughes, and said that he belonged to the Quartermaster's Department. After being sentenced, however, he admitted his guilt and gave his true name, and confessed that he enlisted in Baltimore on the 23d of March in the 23d United States infantry, was 23 years of age and had deserted. He said his punishment was just, and he hoped others would take warning by his fate.

JUNE 21, 5 A. M.-Some skirmishing took place yesterday and last evening along the line, but no change of position has been made by either party during the past two days. The enemy are busy throwing up works at different points, and although our lines reach within three-quarters of a mile of the city, they seem determined to defend it to the last.

THE SIEGE OF PETERSBURG. [Special Correspondence Phila. Inquirer.] HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 21, 7 a. m.—Yesterday was quiet, that is, there was no assaults and no line of battle firing; but our batteries kept exchanging occasional compliments with those of the enemy, so assure one that two large armies lay in close proximity. The number of casualties in this kirmishing has been rather large. The relative positions of our own and the rebel army appear to be nearly the same as at the several points where they have lain for a time in opposing lines of battle from the Ra-pidan hither. Both occupy similar lines of intrenchments, within short rifle range of each other, but as it devolves on us to attack, the enemy derives the greates advantage from his works. One unfamiliar with military operations can hardly form a conception of the value of mere impromptu earthworks; rifle-pits, such as can be constructed in a single night. But troops who have had to charge them can fully appreciate their importance as parts of a defensive system.

Every attack upon such works, unless it is a surprise, costs hundreds or thousands of lives, and men ensconced behind them can successfully hold at bay largely superior numbers. These impromptu works are all that now enable the rebel army to keep us out of Petersburg. The strong fortifications taken by the advance of our army, on the evening of the 15th, were the regular defenses of the place, and, had they been fully manned, could only have been taken by regular siege approaches, requiring protracted labors. That we gained possession of them so easily was an immense advantage, and is the more satisfactory because it is an unequivocal strategic victory over the wily rebel commander, to whom it must be extremely mortifying. He was, for once at least, held in uncertainty as to our movements long enough to enable us to beat him in point of time—an achievement which the chivairy ought to consider a decided feat, so confident have they always felt in his vigilance and promptness. The fact that the negro troops of the 18th corps had the most impertant share in the capture of these works has won for dark skins a much higher respect than they have hitherto had from the soldiers of the they have hitherto had from the soldiers of the Army of the Potomac; and our artillerymen, who, without a contest, have planted their guns upon the captured heights in sight of the spires of Petersburg, speak in warmly appreciative tones of the service rendered them. Our line is nearly the same as when I last described its position. I may add that a rebel fort (Fort Clinton) on the other side of the Appenattor, which bears upon our position here, is within range of Fort Springfield, in Gen. Butler's line of fortifications, and is commanded by it. ed by it.

The Mormons in Utah have resolved to cut a canal from the Provo river, commencing at the mouth of the canon, about 5 miles above Provo City, by way of Pleasant Grove and American Fork cities, to Lehi. It will afford the first-named settlement water enough for the crops. Brooklyn is so overrun with canker worms that Beecher took occasion a few Sundays ago to preach a sermon upon the subject, and in his characteristic way to deduce some useful meral lessons from their presence.
